THE HYBRID MODEL:
How technology is shaping the future of education

“ As education systems were forced to comply with social distancing regulations, many schools came to appreciate the multiple efficiencies that can be gained from remote learning models

A hybrid model will likely rely on emerging technologies that help shift traditional learning towards more personalized and adaptable models

Online models enable us to shape education based on interest and benefit, rather than on what is most economical for a learning facility to offer on-premise

Customized learning models provide children with even greater opportunity to accelerate in subjects that they excel in, potentially even cutting down the time period it takes to secure a qualification or increasing the number of subjects that they can study simultaneously
